News and Comment of Stage Matters and Engagements, Announcements And Sol-Other Gossip.

Mrs. Langtry has arrived in New York to present her latest play "The Degenerates."

Julia Arthur and her magnificent prcduction of "More Than Queen" will be seen at the Lexington opera house for two nights, Jan. 18 and 19th. Miss Arthur's Napoleonic spectacle has been a most pronounced success and her Josephine has left even a stronger impression on the mind of the average Announcements of the Visit of the Stork theatre-goer than her "Lady of Quality," which first won fame and favor for this popular actress. London, Jan. 15 .- A special dispatch from Cape Town, dated Friday evening, January 12, announces that Gen. Warren has crossed the Tugela river.

London, Jan. 15 .- The war office issued at midnight a dispatch from Field Marshal Roberts, dated Cape Town, Sunday, January 14, 8:30 p. m., saving: "There is no change in the situation to-day."

The war office simultaneously issued the following from Lord Roberts, dated Cape Town, January 13, 3:30 p. m .: "Methuen's cavalry reconnaisance returned on January 11. Went 23 miles into Free State. Country clear of enemy, except patrols.

"All quiet at Modder river. "French reconnoitered around the enemy's left flank on January 10. Advanced from Sliumger's farm, on January 11, with cavalry and horse artillery to bombard Boer laager east of Colesberg Junction, but was unable to outflank the enemy.

"Reconnaisance of cavalry and mounted infantry pushed north of Bastard's Nek and examined country borth of Ridge.

"Gatacre reports no change. "All well on December 28 at Mafeking."

If the announcement of Gen. Warren's movement be correct, it is evident that Gen. Buller's forces are spread over a very wide front-perhaps 25 miles-and in the event of a sudden fall of the river, his operations might be full of danger. It is believed that Gen. Buller has no good survey maps of the district. This will add to his difficulties.

Sir Charles Warren's advance probably means an attempt to seize Hlangwane Hill, the main post of the Boers south of the Tugela. Upon the success or failure of these operations depends the whole future of the campaign. Until the result is known Lord Roberts will be unable to decide how to dispose the two divisions and the re-enforcements now arriving.

A dispatch to the Daily Mail from Modder river, dated January 10, gives a rumor that Kimberley was being bombarded.

Panama Canal Scheme Favored.

London, July 12 .- The Times, commenting editorially upon the possibility of the United States building the Panama canal, says: "Since the Venezuela boundary dispute has been the latter part of 1898 when Brown, the remains, the local official decided and a great portion of Latah county, settled and Anglo-American friendship has been sealed, the Panama scheme is more likely to be carried out than the plan for a Nicaragua canal. England would certainly not be jealous of America if the latter complete the Panama canal, being satisfied that the United States would treat British shipping in a liberal MORA IS REMOVED.

Gen. Wood Has Changed the Fiscal of the Cuban Supreme Court Recently Established.

Havana, Jan. 13 .- "Federico Mora, fiscal of the supreme court, is hereby removed from office for the good of the public service.

"This removal is the result of an investigation into the conditions existing in the administration of justice under his supervision."

The foregoing official order was handed to Senor Mora by Gov. Gen. Wood. Senor Mora's fall has been predicted ever since the first case was brought against the custom house officials, and the disgraceful condition of the prisons, especially as affecting those awaiting trial, has been generally charged against him. For some time it has been said that Mora has been devoting too much attention to social affairs and too little to his du-

Gen. Wood's investigation has shown that the office of the supreme court fiscal is largely responsible for a number of the untried cases and that not only Mora, but others in the department of justice, have been persistently trying to block the charges against customs officials whom Collector Bliss is anxious to prove guilty of wholesale bribery and corruption.

Every possible influence has been exerted to protect the incriminated cle hanging within a foot of his head. DISASTER AT SEA.

Probably Sixty Lives Were Lost by the Wrecking of a Steamer Off the Newfoundland Coast.

St. Johns, N. F., Jan. 13.-The following comprises all the details regarding the wrecking in St. Mary's pay that can be obtained.

The ship is a two masted steamer of nearly 3,000 tons and probably carried a crew of 60, with possibly some passengers. She went ashore before daybreak on Thursday, striking a this social mystery. One day she chatted ledge at the foot of the cliff, where escape was hopeless. The crew launched the boats but probably during the panic some were crushed against her sides, others being swamped, and all the occupants apparently perishing.

The ship was seen to be on fire by residents six miles away. Attracted to the scene they found the after half of the wreck blazing fiercely and the forepart under water. The vessel soon went down. There is not the slightest prospect that any soul on board escaped death, as the intense midwinter cold would kill any who escaped drowning.

A trunk filled with woman's clothing has been washed ashore there as well as a garment which is either a and this tube restored to its normal conwaterproof cape, such as used by a woman, or a man's overcoat. Regulations of the Army Pertaining to the Wearing of Badges and Other Decorations.

Washington, Jan. 13.-The secretary of war has amended the regulations of the army pertaining to the wearing of badges and similar decorations so as to permit officers and enlisted men, who in their own right, or by right of inheritance, are members of military societies; of men who served in the armies and navies of the United States in the war of the revolution, the war of 1812, the Mexican war and the war of the rebellion or are members of the regular army and navy union, to wear on all occasions of ceremony the distinctive badges of such societies.

It is also provided that medals of honor and the several distinctive marks given for excellence in rifle practice as well as army corps badges, may be worn on occasions of ceremony. The wearing of insignia "buttons," however, is prohibited.

The Over Zealous Bellboy Gets a Saitable Reward for His Cheek.

A well-known drug drummer, who is pay-ing his regular holiday visit to New Orleans, took the train last Monday evening for a litside trip to Baton Rouge and in the hurry of his departure left a handsome bone-han-lled umbrella hanging on a hook in the obby of the hotel. It was a tempting prize, but probably every kleptomaniac who saw it supposed the owner was seated near at hand. At any rate, it remained undisturbed and was still there yesterday when the drum-mer returned. "By the way," he remarked, after he exchanged greetings with the clerk, "I've managed somehow lo lose my new bone-handled umbrella. Have any of you seen such a thing lying around the office?" A quick-witted bellboy heard the question and, glancing around, saw the missing artiments, he promptly grasped the ferrule. "Is this the one?" he inquired. "Yes!" ex-claimed the traveler, delighted, "and I must say I'm surprised nobody has nipped it!"
"Aw, they couldn't do that," replied the bellboy. "I've been holdin' on to it fer y' ever since y' hung it up." The drug drummer stopped with his hand half way down his pocket and a whimsical smile overspread his counterance. "Well," he said, slowly, "I've with the said of the his countenance. "Well," he said, slowly, "I was intending to give you half a dollar, but if you've been holding that umbrella for three consecutive days you're more in need of a tonic. Here is a capsule of quinine and iron." The gloom which settled down upon the bell bench might have been hewn with an ax.—N. O. Times-Democrat.

Near Unto Greatness.

A Louisville woman who spent the summer at a famous mountain resort in Virginia declares that, like all other places of the kind, it has its star boarder. This or the kind, it has its star boarder. This one was a young southern girl. She was not pretty, yet far from being homely: there was no special style about her, and she was as heavy on hand as a log, and, last of all, she was not particularly rich. But she lorded it over the place, and all the other boarders walked behind like the sister of giddy "Dodo." The Louisville woman lost sleep—trying to find the key to this social mystery. One day she chatted and on until finally the subject turned on the Davis family. "Did you know any of them?" she asked.

"No," replied the girl-who-walked-before, grandly, "but I just missed traveling on the train once with Winnie Davis."

And then the other women from the south gazed reverently at the "just missed," and the Louisville lady exclaimed, softly: "Eureka!"—Louisville Times.

The broad light from the window fell full upon him, showing him to be a man of but medium height, though stout and pale of His eyes were dark, his nose lon and slightly dished at the bridge. The mouth was sensual, and bespoke his character at a glance, though his face was by no means coarse or weak. His brow was not broad, but it was smooth and open, and his brown hair, greatly puffed about his ears, was tied into a queue behind and profusely

But he was not a striking figure despite the gorgeous uniform of scarlet and gold adorned with the waistcoat ribbon and brilliant star of his knightly order. Something there was about him which impressed me with the littleness of his nature, and there was a lurk in his side glances wholly in compatible with an honest, fearless spirit Undoubtedly he was a man proud of his rank and power—a man much given to selfcommunion and silence. His official standing was indicated by the single heavy epaulet adorning his right shoulder. His sword, with its belt wrapped about it, he carried in

"I declare, madam," he said, as he straightened himself and walked to a handsomely appointed table, on which he do posited his sword, "you have braved the storm and stolen a march on me, as you promised. Have you other charms to pit against the terrors of tempest and earthyour liking?" And as he pronounced the name he recognized my presence by look and an almost imperceptible bending

"You interrupted me before I had come to conclusions. affair is none of my making, and I am broken-hearted at its necessity. Oh, necessity is such a dreadful word!-is it not, Capt. Lounsbury? Really, Sir Henry, I supposed you would not come for an hour yet, but, now that you are here, I will leave you to settle with the captain while I look after my recreant ward. Sir Henry, I feared I would have found her with you. Ah! Capt. Lounsbury, one's children, be they ours by law or nature, are such a trial-such a trial! When shall I know of your decision, Sir Henry?" Then with an upward look and clearly affected archness, "You will honor me to-night, will you not, Sir Henry?"

What answer Clinton made I never knew. He held out his hand to her, the fall of lace from his cuff almost covering it, and with a step as unnatural as that in the minuet escorted her into the hall, closing the door behind him.

He was not absent long. I had but time take in the details of the elegantly furnished apartment, from its carved in eplace chind the table to the carved casing of the window overlooking the Hudson, when e entered rather hastily, his face no nger bearing its genial expression, and th something of a business-like air scated self at the table, motioning me to take

For an answer I took it from my pocket and laid it before him, at the same time realizing with a start that the communication given to me the day before had been left in my room in the hurry of escaping from the tavern. He picked up the document I laid before him, glanced at it, and then, rising, went to a bookcase, which on being opened disclosed a small strong-box. This he unlocked, and taking from it several rouleaux of coin laid them on the table.

"You must have money; you cannot get ready without it. You will have many expenses. Listen! I shall not intrust you with a packet to General Pigot. The venture is too hazardous. Tell him to hold Newport to the last extremity, and I will start to his relief within two weeks. I

"The matter of the cruise is plain enough, but your excellency hinted at secret instructions."

"Yes, yes," he answered. "It was that I referred to a moment since." He hesitated, and then pointing to my arm, continued, "Perhaps your wound would cripple you for active service?"

character of a snarl; his eyes flashed, and he bent forward eagerly. I caught a glimpse of the villainy of this man, and without winking promptly replied: "Save myself, your honor!"

As though smitten by a revulsion of feeling, he started back and exclaimed:

"No! no! Not that! Great God! not quite so quick! What a tool you are! Is there no other way. Let me think; let it the meaning of this?"

The last remark was drawn from him by noise of controversy in the hall without, the sudden opening of the door, and the entry of a female unannounced. She was but before the door had fairly closed chind her, with a graceful move of her arm she uncovered her face, and I involuntarily came to my feet as I recognized the young girl whose beauty had struck me as I was bout leaving the Sprite.

Her eyes were red from weeping, and, indeed, the tears on her cheeks were as apparent as the few raindrops on her silken hood, as well as on her plain though elegant costume. Over her white brow and from under the back of her head covering there strayed a few locks of hair, which some might have called red, but red they were not, being the richest of auburn, and of such a nature that the damp of the air had curled them into a mass of crisp waves.

If tears were on her cheeks, there were none in her voice as she advanced before the Englishman. As she came to within a pace of him she halted, and demanded in a low, firm tone, which for all its firmness was

"Sir Henry Clinton, where is my brother?" Clinton dropped his eyes, while a heavy frown contracted his smooth forehead. For an instant he appeared about to give way to temper, but finally unpuckered his brows and replied easily, as though patronizing a your aunt.' "Call your Mrs. Badely no aunt of mine, Sir Henry. She may be my guardian, but none of her blood flows in my veins. Be that as it may, sir, she has but this moment referred me to you. My brother has been gone a week. You have promised each day that I should see him the next. Sir Henry, where is my brother?'

The decidedly defiant tone of the last demand made me wonder at the audacity of the speaker, but instead of arousing the temper of the man to whom it was addressed, it made him rather draw into himself, though not without an effort at self-control. Again he arose and paced the floor behind his desk, but finally stopping in his walk, took a long breath as if he had arrived at a determination, and suddenly turning to me, said:

"Capt. Lounsbury, the plan I mentioned will remain in abeyance.-My dear Gertrude," he continued, addressing the girl, "I have been trying to save you from pain, but, as you will have the truth, I will give it to you. Your brother has been discovered acting in the interests of the enemy. His offense was clear, and he has acknowledged it. He was arrested one week ago this day. He was tried fairly, convicted, and sentenced to be hanged as a spy. Yesterday he perished in the fire at Cruger's Wharf before the sentence could be execute

Now at these words I guessed this was the girl whom I had been expected to kidnap and make way with, and my first impulse quickly controlled, was to blurt out the fact of her own danger. It had become plain, however, that Clinton could not screw his courage to going the length of even indi rectly taking her life, much as he wished for some reason to be rid of her. It was strongly forced on me that he was being used as a cat's-paw by the woman who was known to powerfully influence his actions, even to the extent of altering the plans of a campaign. As he finished his statement, I knew he had told the girl an untruth, or he had been lying to me, as he had informed me that the brother was about to be hanged, no mention having been made of his death by fire. Instantly there came to mind my encounter safety of the gallant girl, and yet my head apart and eyes widely strained. Her color faded a trifle, but after a breath or two she answered-stoutly:

"Gen. Clinton, that is false! My brother held no communication with anyone beyond the lines at Kingsbridge. You have overshot your mark. It was I, sir, who informed Gen. Washington of your intended movement into the Jerseys, but my poor brother has been doomed because he is in possession of facts which would compromise Sir Henry Clinton were they known abroad. I, too, know them. Work your will on me, a girl -I care not; but if you injure a hair of the head of Beverly, all England shall know how Mr. Henry Clinton obtained his knighthood, together with other matters which would make interesting reading. [Two years before, Gen. Clinton had challenged Lord George Germain, of the British ministry. In fear of his life, Germain promised Clinton a title and the command of the army in America if he would withdraw the challenge. Clinton did so, obtained leave of absence from America, went to London and was knighted by the king. Returning, he succeeded Gen. Howe, who resigned shortbefore the evacuation of Philadelphia. The affair caused great scandal at the time.] By his appearance, here is doubtless one of your familiars," she went on, indicating me by a fine look of intense scorn. "Order him to apprehend and make way with Gertrude King, who, by the help of God, has been, is now, and always will be, devoted to her own land and its liberties!" As she uttered these words she was sub-

ime. Her figure swayed slightly, her eyes sparkled, and her voice rang like a bell. There was no effect of bravado, but it was apparent that with her there had come a crisis, and she had thrown off her mask, either because it was no longer of use or for the purpose of sacrificing herself for her brother. Her great beauty, her youth, her fearlessness-ay, even the grace of her pose, set off by her faultless costume gave weight to the words which on her listeners pro-

"Sir," she said, cutting him short, "if I am, I will be released. You have now an opportunity to confiscate my property as will also go to enrich your paramour. You have taken me for a child, but I am not the helpless girl you think me. I know your motives. They are money, and fear, and Mrs. Badely. And now I have but one de-mand, Gen. At that moment the hall door for a second time was thrown open violently by a female and now it was Mrs. Badely who reentered There was no affectation about her as she hurried in and closed it behind her. With her hand on the knob, her face blanched to an ash color, and her whole figure tren bling, she pointed to the defiant girl and burst out:

"She is a traitor! she is a traitor! Let her not go hence! O Sir Henry! Sir Henry! he has escaped! He has been back and—taken

She got no further, but, tottering slightly, gradually sank to the floor in a real or pretended faint.

CHAPTER X.

THE HEROISM OF GERTRUDE KING. Gen. Clinton stood as if stricken with catalepsy, while I sprang to Mrs. Badely Discarding the useless disguise, I threw my sling from me and, lifting the lady, bore her to the couch. As her aunt sank to the floor the girl had given a vielent start, and, as though taking for granted that the escaped party referred to was her brother, raised her hands and exclaimed fervently. "Thank God! thank God!" Then the emotion she had bravely suppressed when her misfortune seemed at its height overcame her on the relaxation of the strain, and she broke into a torrent of tears. Giving no further attention to Mrs. Badely, I turned and looked at Clinton. He had sunk into his chair, and was undergoing a strong inward struggle, but the expression of his face boded little good to the girl who still stood before him. In a moment straightened himself, and pointing to the weeping maiden, sternly said: "Capt. Lounsbury, call my orderly, and see that this woman is placed in confinement. Report to me when it is done

It appeared that the moment had arrived when I must declare myself, for to allow this heroic girl to suffer the indignity of arrest while I could prevent it, was not in my books. I was about to turn on him with my answer when she lifted her head, and, directing her wet eyes toward Clinton, said as firmly as she had before spoken:

"Gen. Clinton, I care little for what you may do to me. The only load I had has been lifted. My brother is free! Listen to me! He was never arrested as a spy, never tried in any court, never condemned to be hanged! I knew he was to be secretly removed from his prison; of that I was informed by one of your own officers, and I came here to demand his whereabouts. Is not my so-called beauty as powerful for my interests as your commands for yours? Lock to yourself, Sir Knight! What I know of you will find a ready ear, but, Sir Henry Clinton, you will scarce have the courage to demand an earldom from the one who hears

The utterly fearless way in which she spoke, coupled with sarcasm and a taunt the nature of which I then knew nothing, drove the British general into a fury. Springing to his feet and again slamming the table, he

"Arrest her, sir! Arrest her instantly! Stop her vile mouth! Good God! am I to be thus bearded by a self-confessed trait-

"Hell and furies!" he thundered, fairly bounding from the floor. "What means this treason? You are under arrest yourself, What, sir! you defy me?" As he spoke he moved from behind the table and took a couple of strides toward the hall; but seeing his intention was to call the sentry, and that for me it was now the whole pace or the scaffold, in an instant I was ahead of him, and, quickly locking the door, threw the key through the open win-

I was none too soon. Through the heavy mahogany I heard the approach of hurried footsteps, and the knob twisted while yet my hand was on it.

With an oath Clinton turned toward the table and grasped his sword; but again I anticipated his action and was before him. Laying my left hand on the weapon, pressed it down, while with my right I pushed him into his chair and held him there. He paled as though fearing immediate assassination, and gasped, then after a fruitless effort at freeing himself, he shouted

"What! Capt. Lounsbury, would you mur der your commander?"

I rapidly shifted my grip, and to prevent his further clamoring placed my hand over his mouth, pinning his head fast to the back of the chair. "Call me not Lounsbury!" I exclaimed in my excitement. "I have been damned by that name weeks enough! Know me as Donald Thorndyke, an enemy to the king.

—Quick, now!" said I turning to the girl. "Eere is a pass ready written. Get awayout of the window! I will cover your go-And with that I snatched the writing from the table and held it toward her.

By this time there was a violent knocking at the door and some shouting in the hall, but, taking no notice of the shortness of time allowed for her escape, the girl stepped close to me, and, peering into my face with undisguised surprise upon her own counten-

"Are you from Washington?" "Nay, miss," I answered, "I am but a free-lance; not from him, but for him to the end. Hurry your leaving, and God bless you

"I am already known and outlawed. Hurry! Heaven help the first man who enters this room now! If you would prevent bloodshed, leave at once. I will follow betimes. Live for your brother's sake! Get gone-get gone! Taking the paper I had pushed into her hand, she gave me a smile that was a benediction, the memory of which comes to me as I write. Turning, she hastened to the balcony. I saw her gather her skirts, climb over the light iron rail and drop-a matter easily accomplished, as the window sill was a scarce six feet from the soil of the gar-

And then I turned attention to myself and my own desperate situation.

There was nothing to do but follow her immediately if I hoped to escape, but, knowing that every second's delay helped the maiden, I still held the general so that he could neither cry out nor prove aggressive, and so continued holding him for perhaps the space of a minute. In the meantime the attacks on the door were becoming more violent, and even the one through which Clinton had entered was now being tried. Mrs. Badely, who had been unattended through the episode, suddenly recovered her senses and lifted herself upright on the couch, when, seeing me apparently strangling her lover, she set up a shrieking that must have driven to despera-

a wayside junction. While waiting for his train, he seized the opportunity of making friends with the station-master. One of the kindest-hearted men, he was very fond of trying to enter into the varied interests of those with whom he came in contact. However, on this occasion he did not find it easy to discover the exact topic in which his new friend was interested. So reluctantly he fell back on his particular "shop." i. e., the traffic. "I suppose, with the race meeting taking place to-day, there has been some very heavy traffic on your line?" Inadvertently, the bishop had indeed struck the station-master's weakest point-not the traffic, but racing. So for the next quarter of an hour he listened in his kindly way to the various merits of the horses engaged in the St. Leger, and the chances of success. At last, to the bishop's great relief, it must be admitted, the train arrived. and, shaking hands with his racing friend, he got into a carriage. He had not traveled very far, however, when, the train having pulled up, he heard the station-master's voice, asking if the bishop of --- was in the train. Hastily the bishop declared his presence. Of course, his fellow-passengers in the third-class carriage (it was the bishop's boast that he always traveled third) were on the qui vive to know what the station-master wanted with the bishop, while quite a little knot of spectators gathered around the carriage window. funeral Announcements of Deceased Citizens.

Wm. S. Talbott, a most esteemed citizen of Bourbon, died very suddenly Saturday at Columbia, S. C., after an illness of but a few days. He was about sixty-one years old and was an excellent Christian gentleman and business man popular with his fellow men, and had been engaged in buying horses in Bourbon and shipping them to Columbia, for many years. He was married but a Displays, one dollar per inch for first insertion; half rates each insertion thereafter. Locals, or reading notices, ten cents per line each insertion. > Thr deceased was a manly, generous and noble Christian gentleman who was the friend of everyone who knew him. He was a leading farmer and few citizens of Bourbon were better known or more respected. The deceased was a faithful church member, an indulgent husband, and an exemplary citizen, and, his demise will be greatly deplored. He is survived by his wife, who was formerly Miss Lida Anderson, of Georgetown, and two children, Hugh and Margaret.

The funeral will be held this morning at eleven o'clock at the home on Pleasant street of his brother-in-law, Dr. W. C. Ussery, with Rev. F. W. Eberhardt conducting the services. The remains will be interred at the Paris cemetery.

Imperial spectacles and eyeglasses have perfect lenses, always perfectly centred and made of purest material, set in frames of the highest elasticity and consequently of greated durability, united with the utmost lightness and elegance. When both frames and lenses are scientifically fitted by Dr C. H. Bowen's system they always give satisfaction for they are perfect. Never buy cheap spectacles, nor of men who do not know how to fit them You will get poorly adjusted spectacles, or poor, imperfect lenses, and are better off without any glasses than with either of these defects. Buy imperial spectacles of a reliable, skillfur dealer, and they will last longer without change and be cheapest in the end.

We have engaged the services of Dr. C. H. Bowen who will visit our store on the second and last Thursdays of each month and invite all to call and have their eyes examined, for which there is no charge. Satisfaction guaranteed or money refunded.

HASTY JUDGMENT.

I am sorry I said it! Ah, words that I fain would recall! Much may be placed to his credit, There is good in him, after all!

I called him a fool and a cheat, He inspired contempt in my breast-But why judge a man by his faults-By his worst instead of his best?

Why judge by the dross, when the gold May be seen underneath if we look? Why glance at the cover and judge Off-hand of the worth of the book?

I am sorry I said it. Alas, to have judged ere I knew! There is much to be placed to his credit, For he has his good points too!

I called him a fool and I said His mouth was a fountain of lies! Too bad to have judged ere the scales Had fallen away from my eyes! There is virtue in each of us still,

Whatever his failings may be— I have heard that the man I despised Has great admiration for me!

I am sorry I said it! Ah, words that I fain would recall!

There are marks to be placed to his credit, There is good in him, after all!

ATTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTTT

LOUD burst of applause greeted A the famous singer Olympia as she ished the queen's song in the opera "Peau d'ine," at the Gaity theater. The climax of the whole piece was this song of the fairy queen's, who appeared only once during the performance. The part was usually taken by a less accomplished singer, but for this engagement the famous Olympia, who had sung in grand opera over Europe and America, had been secured, as she happened to be in Paris at the time with no other engagement. As usual, when her name appeared on the bill, the house was packed by an enthusias-

In spite of the universal reputation her talent had won for her, Olympia remained simple and good. She had made an enormous fortune, which she devoted entirely to her art, and to charity. Her kindness to struggling young singers and ambitious but unrecognized actors, had made her as famous as her beautiful voice and charming personality.

Of Olympia's origin nothing was known, though there were many stories circulating about her. The one which gained most general credence portrayed her as a great lady who had been drawn irresistibly from a high position to the stage, and, thereupon, disowned by her family. The only certainty felt about her was that her reputation was irreproachable, and that she kept the scores of adorers constantly rotating about her, at a respectful dis

When the song ended the queen reof the subjects of the play. It was a sumptuous procession which passed before her in gorgeous costume. Each subject, as he passed his queen, stopped, bowed and then mored on to make room for the next. The queen always watched with interest these obscure and awkward subjects of hers, wondering what different feelings, what stifled longings and discouraged ambitions, lay beneath the brilliant clothes. One among the number had excited her interest and her sympathy. He seemed different from the others; his bearing was dignified, his face refined, his manners perfect. Arrived before her, he would sweep her a bow like a grand seigneur, fixing upon her eyes in whose expression she read profound admiration and deep melancholy mingled. That he had suffered some misfortune she felt as sure as that he was worthy of something better than a humble part in a fairy opera.

The mute homage offered her each night touched her inexpressibly, and she longed to do something to help the man, but hesitated to offer. She felt her heart beat faster at his approach in the procession, and grew alarmed at the strength of her own feelings.

To-night, when the play was over. she pointed him out to the manager. "Who is that man?" she asked.

"A poor fellow named Chatelain," replied the manager. "There are hundreds like him, doing this kind of work for three francs a day.'

The manager was mistaken. His "poor Chatelain" was in reality a Spanish gentleman named Juan Rodriguez de Penaflor. Born in Madrid, raised in the midst of luxury, he had inherited at his parents' death an enormous fortune. Through bad management and extravagance, this had gradually been reduced, until only a small part remained. This Juan thought to use in the only way he knew as a means of redeeming the whole, at the gaming table, and here he lost all that was left to heart of pearls, and from the mon ent his eyes fell upon it he had longed to possess it in order to present it to his queen, as a token of his adoration.

He knew he could never tell her of his love, and he longed to lay some visible token at her shrine. In former days he would have thought nothing of purchasing such a trinket-now his happiness depended upon obtaining it. To think of buying it was hopeless-he was making but the barest of livings.

One day the heart was gone from the window, and Juan could see it inside the shop, lying, with many other pieces, on the counter. He stepped inside, where several people stood locking at all sorts of beautiful things being displayed by the jeweler. The heart of pearls was pushed a little away from the others; the people were not looking his way; his hand stole out and slowly moved toward the cherished object. He turned cautiously to make sure he was unobserved, and looked straight into the face of Olympia, the singer, who was standing just behind him.

"How do you do?" she said, pleasantly, but he could not answer. He stood there before her confused, ashamed, unable to speak.

"I saw you and followed you in," sne continued. "I have wanted to speak to you for a very long time. I am sure you can find something better than your present position at the Gaity. If you will take my card to Roberts, the theatrical agent, I am sure he can find you something more suited to you," and she drew a card from her pocketbook and wrote an address on it with a little gold pencil, and handed it to Juan.

He managed to stammer his thanks, and she left him, without knowing what she had saved him from.

Sleep did not come to Juan that night, He was frozen with horror at the thought of what he had been about to been to his goddess to have presented her such a gift. He arose the next morning feeling that the bitterness of be arranged. his life was too great to bear.

heard of him after her engagement had expired, and often wondered if he had delivered her card and found a position. On the table lay a large bunch of lilies of the valley, and beside them a small jeweler's box. She opened it and saw, lying on white velvet, a beautiful heart of pearls, of exquisite workmanship. The name on the card was strange to her-"Don Juan de Penaflor."

After a last triumphant appearance that evening a card was brought to her bearing the same name.

"I will see him," she said to the boy. When he came she recognized him instantly, and it was her turn to be confused.

"You are not M. Chatelain?" she

"No, mademoiselle, I have come to my own again," he replied, simply, "but I have never forgotten your kindness."

"I must thank you for your gifts," said Olympia. "The flowers I will keep, but the pearls I must ask you to take, as I cannot accept them. They are much too precious for a singer who thinks only of her art."

"If Olympia cannot accept them as a singer, can she not do so as the promised wife of Marquis de Penaflor?

"You honor me too highly," said she, trying to hide her emotion. "Will you give me one day to consider?"

At the close of Olympia's Paris engagement a simple wedding took place at a little suburban chapel covered with ivy. The bride carried lilies of the valley, and her only ornament was a heart of pearls.

INDEBTED TO PEACOCK.

Geometrical Figures Suggested by the Spreading of the Bird's Beautiful Train.

It is highly probable that our ancient and honored friend Mr. Euclid discovered his ideas of geometry by inspecting the outspread tail of a strutting peacock. Ancient and honorable as are the problems of Euclid, it is practically certain that the peacock had been on earth many moons before the father of cubes, squares, angles and parallelograms dawned upon the world. This being so, and the tail presenting such a dazzling combination of geometrical figures-indeed, they might be used for the fashioning of a beautiful mosaicit is quite reasonable to suppose the olc Greek eaught his inspiration from the

With such a statement as a beginning for a story, it is well to back it up with evidence. Only the best evidence is admissible, as one knows who has read Mr. Greenleaf on this branch of the law-that is, if the best can be procured. If it cannot cause must be shown that is satisfactory to the judge. In the present case the best evidence is ocular and fortunately it is at hand. Plats and charts play most important parts in jurisprudence. Maps often determine the value of a case made, for geometry and trigonometry determine to the fraction of an inch the boundaries of a tract of land.

Herewith is presented in evidence an exact reproduction of the widespread tail of a peacock. It is apparent to anybody that the contention is based on reason and probability. Gaze at the intricate figures which are formed by the 250 feathers. Pretty nearly everything that Euclid discovered can be traced there. It is unfortunate that the brilliant plumage of this train-the real tail lies under it and supports it when in the natural position-cannot be added to the picture. But he who has acquaintance with any peacock in full plumage may judge for himself just how much the Greek savant was indebted to the handsome train for his train of ideas .- Chicago Chronicle.

> Probably the impression, altogether too general, that this country has no real national air is the cause, to a large extent, of this condition of affairs. "The Star Spangled Banner," however, is officially our national air or national hymn and there should be little excuse for popular ignorance of that fact. Still, how few persons there are, comparatively speaking, who know the words of Key's song! Within recent years the schools of the country have sung them regularly and in many cases daily. As a result, there are few of the rising generations of Americans who do not know the words. Unfortunately, the children are not always taught to stand when they sing this hymn or hear it lect, and also the further fact that the great majority of the people have not been taught to uncover as the flag is carried by in processions or displayed upon formal occasions.

GUESS AT HIS BUSINESS.

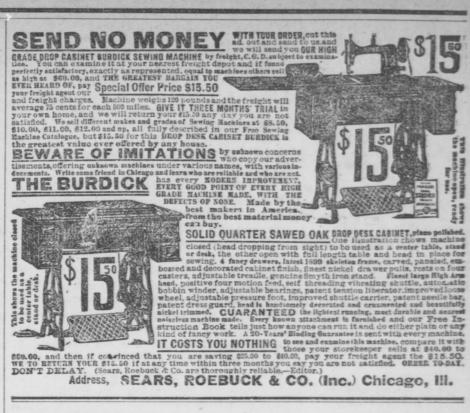

All the Loungers in the Hotel Lobby Were Wrong with One Exception.

Among the usual crowd of new arrivals at the counter of one of the big hotels, after the through trains came in the other evening, was a portly gentleman with a smooth-shaven, jovial countenance and a twinkling solitaire in the knot of his cravat. While waiting his turn to register he took off his hat, mopped his forehead and beamed so genially on the whole corridor that everybody in range felt like smiling back. After he had taken his departure toward his room a little knot of guests stand ing near the desk began to swap surmises as to his business. "He's a horseman," said one of the group, "and is here to attend the winter races." "I don't think so," said another. "He hasn't the exact cut of a horseman. I think he is ahead of some show." "You're both wrong," said a third, "he is a western stockman down here on a pleasure trip.' "Gentlemen," said one of the party who had not yet spoken, "I don't think you exhibit much discernment. Our portly friend is connected in some way with the making of woven wire door mats." "Woven wire door mats?" echoed the others, incredulously, "Yes. He is wearing a very peculiar watch chain which is a duplicate in miniature of a design only used in weaving steel mats. Anyhow, I'll bet the cigars for the crowd that 'm right."

The wager was accepted and a polite note was sent upstairs, asking the stranger to settle the bet. In reply he sent back a large business card. with the legend "Woven steel mats" across the center in huge black type. The astute gentleman who guessed right was highly complimented. "It was a wonderful piece of close observation," remarked one of his friends, after the cigars were lit. "Yes, it was fair," admitted the winner, modestly. "I forgot to mention to you fellows, by the way, that the fat gentleman has one of those enormous business cards of his graed in the crown of his hat. When he mopped his forehead I took the liberty of perusing it, and that may have nided me slightly in my subsequent intellectual deductions. Nothing like keeping your eyes open, boys."-N. O. MODISH LONG COAT.

Stylish Wraps That Well-Dressed Women Are Wearing This Winter.

Every day almost one sees some new idea in the three-quarter coat line. They are always picturesque and usually becoming, but strange to the unaccustomed eye after so many seasons of short, tight jackets or full-length garments. The latest to come across was of fine black cloth in straight sacque lines to the knees, the same length all about. The straps and small gold buttons which fastened the front were almost covered by the long ends of the broad white lace cravat. These ends were deeply fringed with white silk and reached the hem of the coat. About the shoulders there was a charmingly draped hood of the white lace turned up softly with folds of black cloth tucked and stitched with white. About the top of the lace choker, which flared out a little, there was an edge of sable, and a high, flat, soft sable muff was carried. The hands thrust into this looked especially quaint by reason of the wide bell-shaped wrists of the coat sleeves. These wrists were turned broadly back and faced with white lace bordered with sable. A toque of black cloth stitched all over with white was very jaunty with this, its only trimming being down-turned white wings spreading from a large square gold buckle. Quite a new idea is to cut out the edge of these knee-long sacques into scallops and to lengthen them toward the back into a round point. The back in this way, with its straight lines about the waist, gives the effect of a shawl wrap with sleeves. One of these in three shades of gray cloth is no end smart, narrow bands of caracule trimming it. The darkest gray is used for the coat proper, a lighter shade for a narrow under band, which hangs below about three inches, this and the edge of the coat itself bordered with a narrow band of black caracule, both of which round up the front to the bust. About the shoulders there is a triple largest underneath, the lightest-an almost white gray-forming the top, and smallest collar. All are edged with bands of caracule, this fur lining the choker with its slightly flaring points under the chin. A crisp bow of black velvet has ends to the knees and forms the smartest possible cravat.

This cloak was worn in company with a tailor gown of such excellence of cut and finish that it is worthy of description. Its delicate shade of light blue was alone beautiful to behold, as well as its buttons of lapis lazuli, four of which fastened the side of the Eton jacket, the front of which extended in a pointed plastron effect far below the waist line. This coat front was stitched closely in parallel lines of black straight across its whole length. The front panel of the skirt was stitched in the same way, and the skirt on the sides and back was laid in clusters of short tucks. It was completed by a toque entirely of birds' breasts in gray and white, and a sable neckpiece was fastened on the side with five or six tails and an enameled buckle.—Boston Herald.

SHAVED ALL NIGHT.

odd Experience of a Temperance Lecturer Alleged to Be as "Crazy as a Loon."

Not long ago a gentleman of meek and docile appearance visited San Francisco. He was a lecturer. If not already known, be it known now that a lecturer is a person who can talk with more or less fluency on any subject, look serious and in nine cases out of a dozen borrow money. The gentleman to whom this refers was a temperance lecturer. He had fought the demon rum for years and not always with success. He put up at a temperance hotel, and it might be remarked in passing that it is easier to inquire for a temperance hotel in this town than to find one.

But, while our friend was good and pious and virtuous and temperate, he was not proof against influenza. When he reached his hotel he was sneezing fearfully, his head was aching and he had every indication of fever. He sent for a doctor and a wise old practitioner of much experience responded. The patient said he was billed to lecture the following night.

"Then," said the doctor, "take two or three whisky punches, as hot as you can swallow them, and sleep between the blankets."

"Impossible!" said the patient. "I have fought the demon rum all my life, and to-morrow night I will address the flower of the youth of San Francisco on 'Damnation in the Bottle.'

"Well," said the doctor, "if I give you drugs you won't be able to lecture tomorrow night, but if you do as I advise you will be fit."

The lecturer hesitated; then, in a half whisper: "But there is no whisky sold year to be an advanced woman, and yet | in this house, and see what a scandal it I can't wake up in the morning and see | would create if I should send out for

"Oh, I will fix that," exclaimed the doctor. "I will order a bottle of whisky and you can order shaving water."

And thus it was settled. The doctor soon returned with a bottle of old rye and sundry lumps of sugar and a couple of lemons in a paper bag. He then left his patient, promising to return at ten o'clock the following morning to see how matters were progressing.

At ten o'clock next morning the doctor appeared and was met by the Irish porter in the hall near the lecturer's room. The latter, on sezing the doctor, raised a warning finger.

"Whist, whist! For God's sake, whist!" said he. "He's jest gone to shleep, and we've sent for the poice. He's as crazy as a loon." "Crazy, crazy," replied the doctor;

"what do you mean?" "Why, God help this poor sowl," said the porter, "he's been shavin' all night." -San Francisco Examiner

A Suspicious American Tourist.

The American tourist is so firmly con-sinced that he is being cheated on all hands vinced that he is being cheated on all hands during his European travels that he occasionally oversteps the bounds of prudence. "What is the price of this pin?" asked a young man in a Paris shop, handling a small silver brooch of exquisite workmanship. "Twenty francs, monsieur," said the clerk. "That's altogether too much," said the young American. "It's for a present to my sister. I'll give you five francs for it" "Zen it would be I zat gave ze present to your sister," said the Frenchman, with a deprecatory shrug, "and I do not know ze young mademoiselle."—Chicago Chronicle.

Cow in a Golf Match.

Fid Tuits, of Los Angeles, was playing a fi with a triend recently. When he drove from the third teeing ground, he sliced the ball badly and sent it away to one side. It stopped in front of a grazing cow, and Tuits came up just in time to see it disappear into the bovine mouth. When his opponent had made his stroke, Tuits untethered the cow, and, with many sounding thwacks of his club, drove the beast to the third hole. There he made her disgorge the ball, and, neatly holing it, announced that he had made the hole in two strokes. His opponent caimly finished the hole in seven, and claimed the hole. "But I made it in two," protested Tuits, gleefully. "No, you didn't," declared the other; "you made it in 39. You hit that cow 37 times, for I counted every stroke," and Tuits conceded the hole.—San Francisco Argonaut. hole.-San Francisco Argonaut.

Exclusively for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, for cleansing the scalp of crusts, scales, and dandruff, and the stopping of falling hair, for softening, whitening, and healing red, rough, and sore hands, in the form of baths for annoying irritations, inflammations, and chafings, or too free or offensive perspiration, in the form of washes, for ulcerative weaknesses, and for many sanative antiseptic purposes which readily suggest themselves to women, and especially mothers, and for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. No amount of persuasion can induce those who have once used it to use any other, especially for preserving and purifying the skin, scalp, and hair of infants and children. Cuticura Soap combines delicate emollient properties derived from Cuti-CURA, the great skin cure, with the purest of cleansing ingredients and the most refresh ing of flower odors. No other medicated or toilet soap ever compounded is to be compared with it for preserving, purifying, and beautifying the skin, scalp, hair, and hands. No other foreign or domestic toilet soap, however expensive, is to be compared with it for all the purposes of the toilet, bath, and nursery. Thus it combines in ONE SOAP at ONE PRICE, viz., TWENTY-FIVE CENTS, the BEST skin and complexion soap, the BEST toilet and BEST baby soap in the world.

Millions of Women Use Cuticura Soap

All that has been said of Cuticura Soap may be said with even greater emphasis of CUTICURA OINTMENT, the most delicate and yet most effective of emollients, and greatest of skin cures. Its use in connection with Cuticura Soap (as per directions around each package), in the "ONE NIGHT CURE FOR SORE HANDS," in the "INSTANT RELIEF TREATMENT FOR DISFIGURING ITCHINGS AND IRRITATIONS," and in "A SHAMPOO FOR FALLING HAIR, and ITCHING, SCALY SCALPS," and in many uses too numerous to mention, is sufficient to prove its superiority over all other preparations for the skin.
